

A recent study indicated that only 54% of young people in America said their future looks bright. The unemployment rate may stay between 9 and 10 percent through 2011. It's no longer business as usual and politics is not the issue.

It is time to challenge our current assumptions and create new possibilities, but have we lost our collective ability to move beyond obstacles and see possibilities?

Our speaker today has been a student of possibility thinking since 1984. Since 1994 she's been travelling the world helping people see possibilities in their businesses. She's taught possibility thinking to audiences as diverse as Microsoft, American Express and The American Society of Training and Development.

Today she's going to show you how to mobilize the Cycle of Possibility so you can access more possibilities in your business and your life. Please welcome... Merit Gest.
